FLASHBACK

When my friend was little, she didn't speak much. No one bothered to ask her why. Turns out, she thought you can only say words a certain number of times before you lose the ability to say it. She thought that if she spoke too much, she would lose the ability to talk entirely. Just imagine for a moment, if you will, that that were true. Why would the system be in place? Who would assign the numbers to the words? What would you say, if you only had limited chances to say it?

4 SPACE

Oceans of liquid diamonds may exist on Neptune and Uranus.

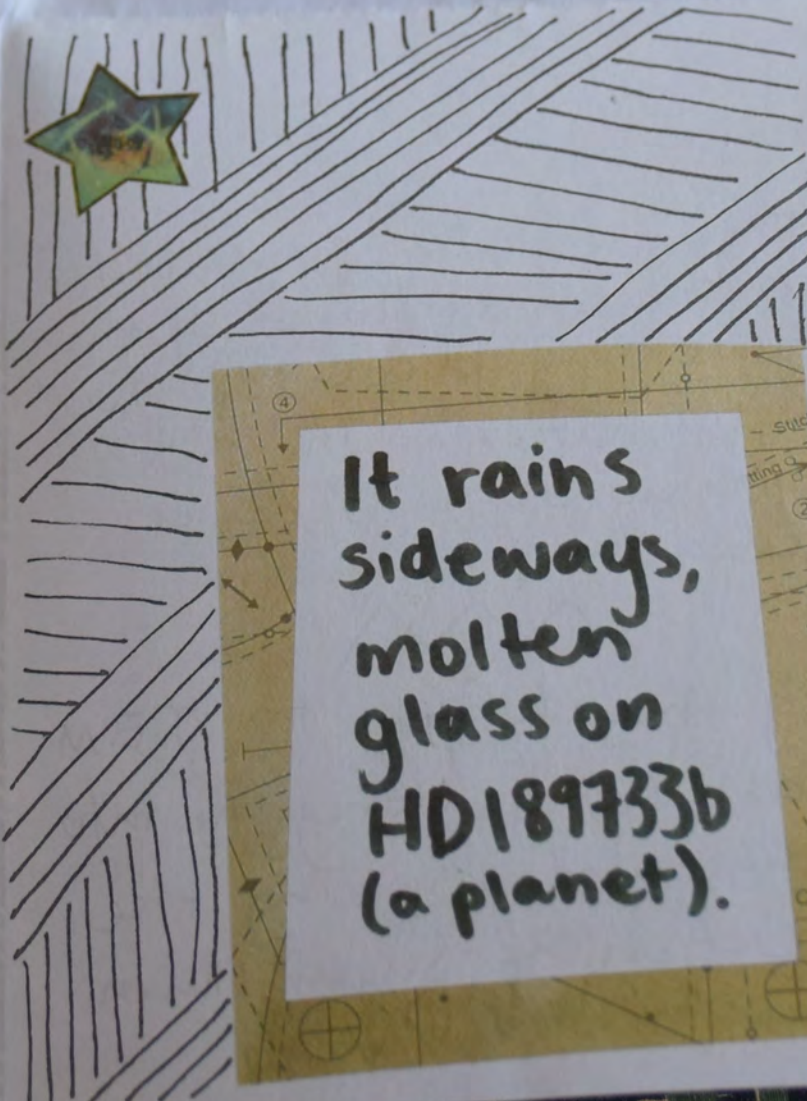

Saturn would float on water.

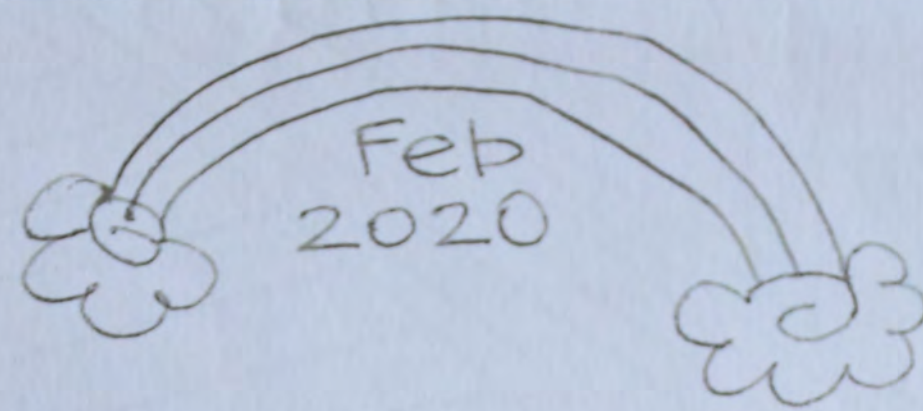

FACTS

NASA beamed a Beatles song into space.

It rains sideways, molten glass on HD189733b (a planet).

This zine was produced on the stolen land of the Bunerong people of the Kulin nations. Their sovereignty was never ceded.

Big thank you to J.E.M.
Hast for getting me into zines and inspiring the creation of Sugar Plum
